Some members of the Chamber of Commerce Special Committee on Rapid Transit are already there and will push through as rapidly as possible. The bill, which has been carefully drafted, contains over 10,000 words. Its essential provisions are: For a new Rapid Transit Commission; for extended pow-ers under the act of 1891, giving the new commission the right to provide for the construction and operation of a system for the account of the city; empowering it either to use plans of the old commission or to adopt new ones; to make contracts for the construction; accept any bld; to contract for the majntenance of the system for not less than thirty-five or more than fifty years; annual rental to be paid to city by the contractor to be an amount fixed by the Commissioners, not less than the interest on the bonds issued by the city to pay for the construction, with an additional sum not ess than I per cent, on the amount of these bonds; contractors to deposit $1,000,000 with the Comptroller as security; to provide the rates of fare and character of service; to give the power of veto to any one Commissioner; to bolish the present commission, &c.

The bill is known as "an act to amen chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891 entitled 'An act to provide for rapid transit railways in cities of over 1,000,000 inhabitants." Its opening clause reads:
THE NEW COMMISSION.

"THE NEW COMMISSION.
"The Commissioners of Rapid Transit shall be the Mayor, the Comptroller or other chief financial officer, the President of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, and Samuel D. Babcock, Seth Low, John Claffin and Alexander E. Orr. Vacancies which may take place shall be filled by a majority vote of the remaining members. The board shall have the authority and powers hereinafter conferred and also such other and necessary powers as may be requisite to the efficient performance of the duties imposed by this act."

The bill then provides that when the The bill then provides that when the consents of local property-owners, or, in lieu thereof, the authorization of the Bupreme Court has been obtained, the board shall at once proceed to prepare detailed plans. If the board decides that the railway shall be constructed for the city, and at its expense, the franchise to construct, maintain and operate it shall be soid at auction, after being advertised in three daily papers three times a week for six weeks. The terms of sale shall provide for its construction under the board's supervision, with the approval of engineers to be appointed by the board, the contractors to pay the engineers salaries.

The terms of sale shall require that the construction shall be begun and finished within a certain time to be fixed by the board. Falling to do so, the binder shall forfier all rights, which shall then be restid.

It is also provided that the terms of sale shall specify the amount of the capital of any corporation undertaking the work, the number of shares such a corporation may issue, the percentage to be paid in cash by the subscribers for the shares, the maximum amount of bonded indebtedness and the maximum rates of fare and freight. The board may reject any bids and readvertise to franchise as often as it may desim necessary for the city's interest. No bid may be accepted without the concurrent vote of six members of the board. Any sale of rights, privileges or franchises shall be made for a definite number of years, but the expiration of the term shall not impair any morigage or other lien on the property of the corporation. Nothing in the act, however, shall be so construed as to extend the term to which the franchises are to be sold.

shall be so construed as to extend the term for which the franchises are to be sold.

BONDS TO BE ISSUED

The Board of Estimate and Apperticument shall appropriate what money is required by the commission, and if it fails to do so the General Term of the Supreme Court shall be called on. For the pays ent of such expenses the Audior, Comptroller or other public officers shall issue and sell revenue bonds of the civil so anticipation of receipt of the cas, and the amount necessary to pay the principal and interest of such honds thall be made a part of the tax levy. All the expenses of the Rapid Transit Commissioners, except the Mayor and Commissioners, except the Mayor and Comptroller, shell be paid a reasonable compensation, to be determined by the General Term of the Supreme Court. The board may at any time determine that the system shall be constructed at this city's expense, and may proceed with the construction of any roads laid out and adopted by their predecessor, or of new roads to be laid out by them. As soon as the necessary consents have been obtained and the final plans prepared, the board shall complete the contract or contract, or a making separate contracts, executed from time to time, the road to be built, in the latter care, as the city's macresities recuire. The contract shall require that the contractors at their own expense shall equip, maintain and operate the road for a term of not best than thirty live nor more than fifty years. The rates a fares and the character of the service are to be regulated by the board, according to the public interests and subject to the public interests and to such conditions as may be determined on. If the contractor default in any payment, however, or neglect to observe his entire contract faithfully, the board may take possession of the road, and maintain and operate it, either as agent of the contractor or by making a contract with some other party. In such a case, any profits over and beyond rentals, &c., shall be paid to the original contractors, and should there be a loss the contractors or their bondsmen shall be jointly and severally liable to the city. No contract may be assigned without the board's written consent.

EXEMPT FROM TAXATION.

The contractors shall be exempt from taxation on rolling stock and other equipments, but not on any real property which may be employed in connection with the construction or operation. To provide the necessary means for the construction at public expense the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, from time to time, shall direct the Comptroller to issue city bonds at a rate of interest not exceeding 31-2 per cent. The bonds shall provide for the payment of the principal and interest in gold. They shall not be sold for less than par value, and the proceeds shall be expended upon vouchers certuiled by Rapid Transit Commissioners. The bonds shall be free from all taxation for city and county purposes and shall be payable at maturity out of the sinking fund for the payment of the city debt. The amount of bonds to be issued and sold shall not exceed $6,000,000, par value, without the consent of the Legislature first being obtained.

While the bill does not provide for an underground road specifically, positively no other form of transit has been considered by the special committee which drafted the bill. Charles Stewart Smith, who is named as one of the Commissioners, has said that New York has outgrown every other system and that the commission, if formed, would plan an underground road and nothing else. The limitation was left out of the bill to give the committee all the leeway possible.

No definite action was taken by the conference, but the sentiment in favor of this amendment was strong.

Other proposed constitutional amendments favorably considered were: Separating city and county from State and national elections; blennial sessions of the Legislature, and cities to own all street railways and other franchises and to lease for not more than thirty years, or to operate as they may see fit.

W. Harris Roome, of the City Club, presided at the conference, and Charles B. Stover acted as secretary. There were present Messrs. Wallace Macfarlane, Henry De Forest Paldwin and Thomas

The Pennsylvania doesn't like this, but the junction company had the land condemned, and a jury fixed the damages to the Pennsylvania Company at $7,185.

The day the verdict was rendered the junction company's official paid the money over to County Clerk McLaughlin, the clerk of the court in which the condemnation trial took place. The Pennsylvania officials considered the damages as fixed inadequate, and intended to appeal to have the verdict set aside. The payment of the money by the junction company blocked this. Now the Pennsylvania contends that the money should have been paid into the court, and it is on this point Judge Lippincott is asked to give a decision.

Ex-Gov. Hedie, on behalf of the Pennsylvania Company, said the junction company claimed that when the money was paid into the court it could take possession of the lands in dispute. He questioned the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court to receive the money, and thought it was a matter for the Court of Chancery. The only jurisdiction the Circuit Court had to receive the money was when a tender and refusal had been made.

Counsellor Vedenburgh, as representative of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and that a tender of the junction company that a tender of the judgment had been made to Counsellor Vredenburgh, as representative of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and that he refused to receive it. He insisted that the payment of the money to County Clerk McLaughlin was legal, and that it was his duty to receive it. The right to condemn. Judge Lippincott said he would give a decision to-morrow.

All the lawyers in the case, after leaving the Court-House, got into the same trolley car for downtown. The rival counsel sat opposite each other. Col. Sterling, President of, the Junction Company, was talking with Charles Thompson, of the law firm of Dickinson. Thompson & McMasters, when Counselior Vredenburgh, of counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, interrupted the conversation, and, addressing Mr. Thompson, said: "Your statement in court that I said certain things was not true. I won't have anything more to do with you, and you will confer a favor or true. I won't have anything more to o with you, and you will confer a favor 'you will keep away from my office." Mr. Thompson looked surprised. Then e answered: "Oh, that's all right. I'm itisfied."

he answered: "Oh, that's all right. I'm satisfied."

Ex-Gov. Bedle told Mr. Thompson he owed Mr. Vredenburgh an apology. Hefore Mr. Thompson could reply Col. Sterling jumped up. He was excited, and, with his finger pointed at Messrs. Vredenburgh and Bedle, he said:

"You gentlemen have done everything you could to hinder and embarrass us in this matter."

"That is not so," declared Mr. Vredenburgh. "You didn't talk that way when you came to my office and asked me to help you."

"Fine help you were!" said Col. Sterling, becoming more excited. "Why, on every proposition made you doubled."

"Why didn't you say that in the first place, like a man," retorted Mr. Vredenburgh, "Instead of coming to my office and asking my assistance?"

This seemed to anger Col. Sterling. He advanced towards Mr. Vredenburgh. "What's that you say?" he asked. Gov. Bedle and the other lawyers got between Col. Sterling and Mr. Vredenburgh and the wrangle came to an end. The passengers enjoyed the squabble.

In order to adopt him Jessie and her mother must come to this city with a letter signed by a minister or a doctor stating they are responsible people and capable of taking care of the baby. Then they must go to Supt. Blake, of the Department of Charities and Correction, at Eleventh street and Third avenue, and give the number of the baby, which is 35. He will then arrange for them to take the infant home. Matron Travers was much pleased to hear that some one wanted to adopt No. 35. "He was a real nice, clean baby," she said, "that any one would like, and I'm sure by his looks he'll live a long while. Poor little girl, she lost her brother, did she? The ce-respondent is John R. Lee, conductor of the milk train on the Susquehanna and Western Railroad. He is married and lives at Middletown, N. Y. For many years he was a conductor on a Susquehanna passenger train, but was transferred about two years ago.

All the letters written to Mrs. Gardner are on railroad blanks used on the milk train. None of them is dated and none passed through the Post-Office. The milk train usually reaches Hackensack about 9 o'clock every night, on its way to Jersey City. It is supposed that some one was there to receive the letters from the conductor and deliver them.

Mr. Gardner is one of the two sons of the late Thomas M. Gardner, who made a fortune in the sawmill business in Arrocola. He is about forty-five years old and a painter. He owns the house he lives in on Central avenue. He was married in 1876 to Mary Corwin, at Schraalenburgh. There are three children, the oldest fifteen, the youngest a babe, about twelve months old. Mr. Gardner looks to be about thirty-live.

"We have been married eighteen years, and up to five or six years ago lived very happy together," he said, "But one or two little things happened which caused me to distrust my wife, One day we were on a Susquehanna train, when she smiled at the conductor? While Dr. Jamal was making his entry in the hospital records two attendants slid the patient on to a stretcher and carried her to the reception-room. One of them noticed the pallor of her face. He leaned over and looked more closely. He raised her arm. It fell back helpiessly. The woman was dead.

Dr. Jamal was surpfised to learn the fact. He said she had asked for a blanket to keep her warm on the way up. He concluded that heart failure was the cause. The body was taken to the Morgue, and later removed to E. J. Contan's an undertaking establishment, at No. 340 Madison street.

Coroners' Physician Conway made an examination, and said the woman died of pneumonia. Nephritis was a contributing cause of death. The funeral will take place this afternoon and the burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Among the recent cases where men have failed to secure proper attention from ambulance surgeons were those of John McCahe, of No. 232 East Forty-fourth street; Peter McSorley, of No. 165 West Thirty-fourth street will avenue, Brooklyn; August Kempfus, of No. 24 East One Hundred and Fourteenth street; John Casey, of No. 234 Franklin avenue, Brooklyn; August Kempfus, of No. 420 Baltic street, Brooklyn.

FOUND HIS FATHER A SUICIDE

Jean Penaud, fifty-four years old, who ccupied apartments on the second floor at No. 151 Fourteenth street, Hoboken. mmitted suicide yesterday afternoon. His thirteen-year-old son found him when he returned from school, shortly before 4 o'clock.

The boy sound all the doors locked, and climbed into the kitchen by means of the back fire-escape. When he entered the dining-room he saw his father sitting in a rocking-chair, with a revolver tightly clutched in his right hand. A pug dog that was much attached to the man lay upon his lap.

The boy, when he had recovered from his fright, screamed for help. Several tenants responded, and Coroner Volk was notified. When his men went to take charge of the body the dog showed its teeth and would not allow them to approach. The dog was coaxed away by one of the family.

Penaud left a letter, stating he was tired of living, and asking to be forgiven for ending his existence.

Mrs. Ross was born in slavery in Virginia, and ran away with her husband and two children, expecting to reach Canada, but was captured and lodged in jail, but her husband succeeded in getting away. One child died in jail, and she was sold, and her mistress brought her in 1845 to Wheeling, W. Va. The family since then moved to Brooklyn, and afterwards to South Orange, N. J. When her master died, with her only daughter she went to live with Mrs. Denslow, and has been there for twenty-five years. Mrs. Ross has always longed to meet the husband of her youth, but never did. the Colonel led a gallant party into the Kilimanjaro Mountains in search of the precious stones. Success crowned their efforts and each had a large basketful by sunrise on the second day. His trial to carry these stones, which weighed 230 pounds all told, back to America was fruitless and he nearly died of heart failure, but he was nursed back to health and life by some of the Kilamangesuto tribe, to whom his generosity compelled him to give $75,000 in gold for their kind offices.

From there he sailed to America in Frank Reid's airship, and is now a stanch defender of the Declaration of Independence. He is a good deal of a philosopher, and at the present time is trying to solve the mooted question, "Does an incubated chicken love its mother?"
